

"THE PHILOSOPHICAL ROOTS OF MEDICAL ETHICS"

Abstract

Ethics and morality are not the same thing. Besides semantic differences, there are differences which arise from the use of the two concepts and from their history.

Ethics is dynamic. Over the years, philosophical trends have developed in each historical period and geographical area and have ultimately influenced the ethics and morality of the respective place and time.